

We seek:

Copyright Litigation Specialist (m/f) (32h or 40h/week; EU; remote; B2B)

Memories might fade away but art stays forever - That's the philosophy of Nico Trinkhaus, the photographer behind Sumfinity. His mission is to unite Europe through his lens.

Together with his 2nd company PhotoClaim, he is also fighting for the rights of photographers.

An overview of your duties:

- You lead resolution of copyright disputes in courts all over the European Union
- You coordinate the initiation of court action when a commercial copyright infringement could not be resolved amicably
- You manage all notices received from the court and act on them in a timely manner
- You develop and establish litigation strategies utilizing the EU Small Claims procedure
- You evaluate and improve the success of applied strategies in individual countries
- You research the varying national differences in copyright law and develop our templates to lead to better litigation success in each EU country

Your profile:

- You have graduated with a law degree and have experience in litigation
- A Lawyer license for representing a client in court is a must
- You share an interest in photography and would like to help the artists
- You absolutely love learning and developing your skillset
- You have excellent command of the English language; you communicate clearly to the point
- You're used to working independently and on your own authority
- You're reliable, have an analytical mindset and high standards to your own work

We're offering:

- Remote work with flexible working hours from anywhere in Europe
- Meaningful work in an international environment

Sounds interesting?

Then send your cover letter and résumé as well as details of your availability and compensation expectations to: jobs@sumfinity.com

Important: Please answer the question "Which tools do you use to organize your work processes?" in the cover letter.